

*Heeeeeeeelp!
There's the fox in the wood!*

THE SECOND CLASSES
OF THE JUNIOR SCHOOL
"GIOVANNI PASCOLI"

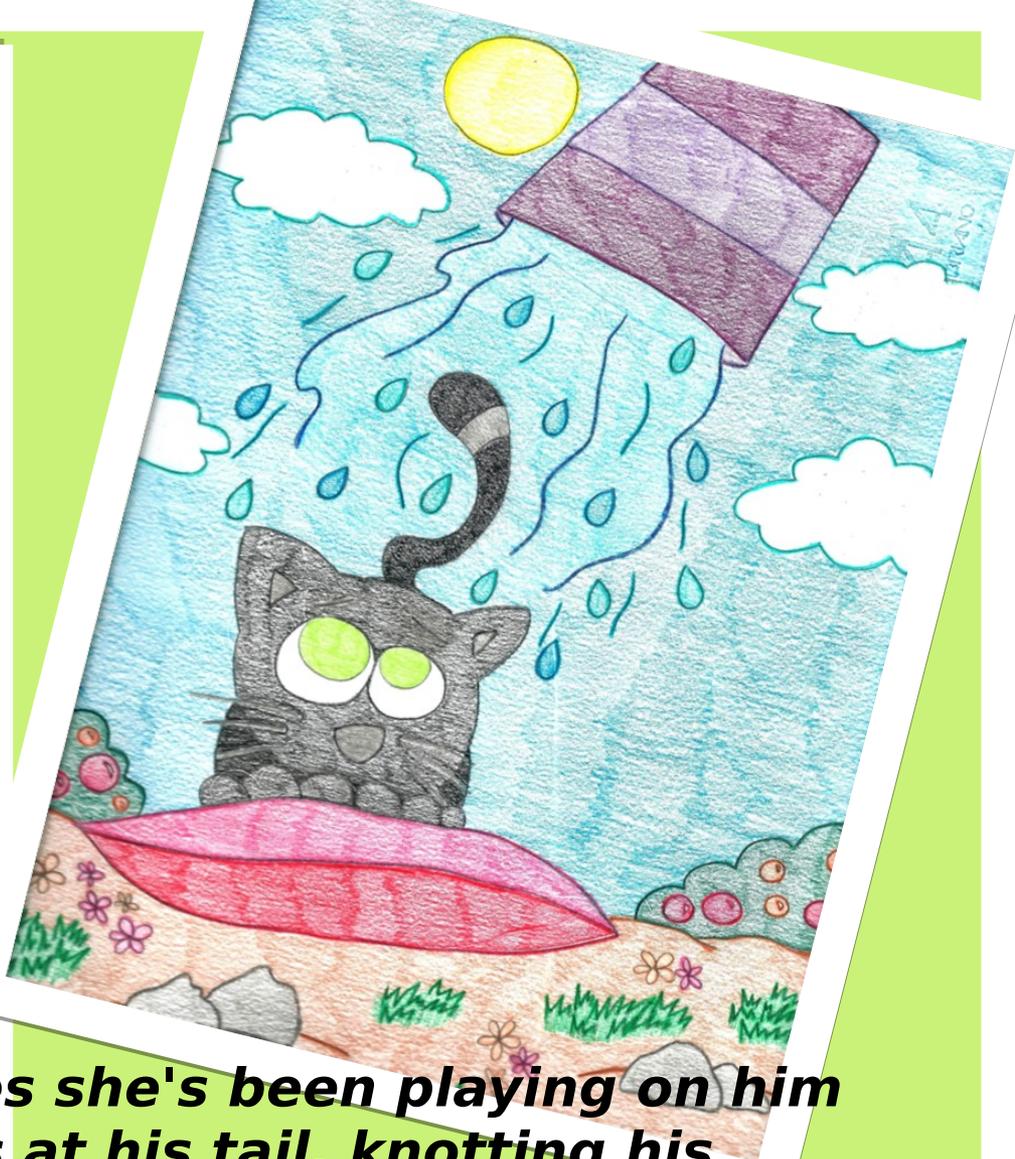

In a thick wood, not so different from many others, the fox has reigned - undisturbed - for a long time.

She isn't such a kind animal and she doesn't think the others could keep up with her self; in fact they are actually forced to be subjugated by her, to get her the best food, to fan her with a very big leaf during the sunny summer afternoons or to make her a comfortable bedding during the cold winters.

Everyone is afraid of her, especially the last arrived, towards which she is really cruel. Her favourite victim has recently been the Black Cat.

The most successful jokes she's been playing on him are: tying the pine cones at his tail, knotting his moustache in strange shapes or throw sudden and unexpected streams of water. After many of these vexations, the Black Cat decides to escape from the wood.

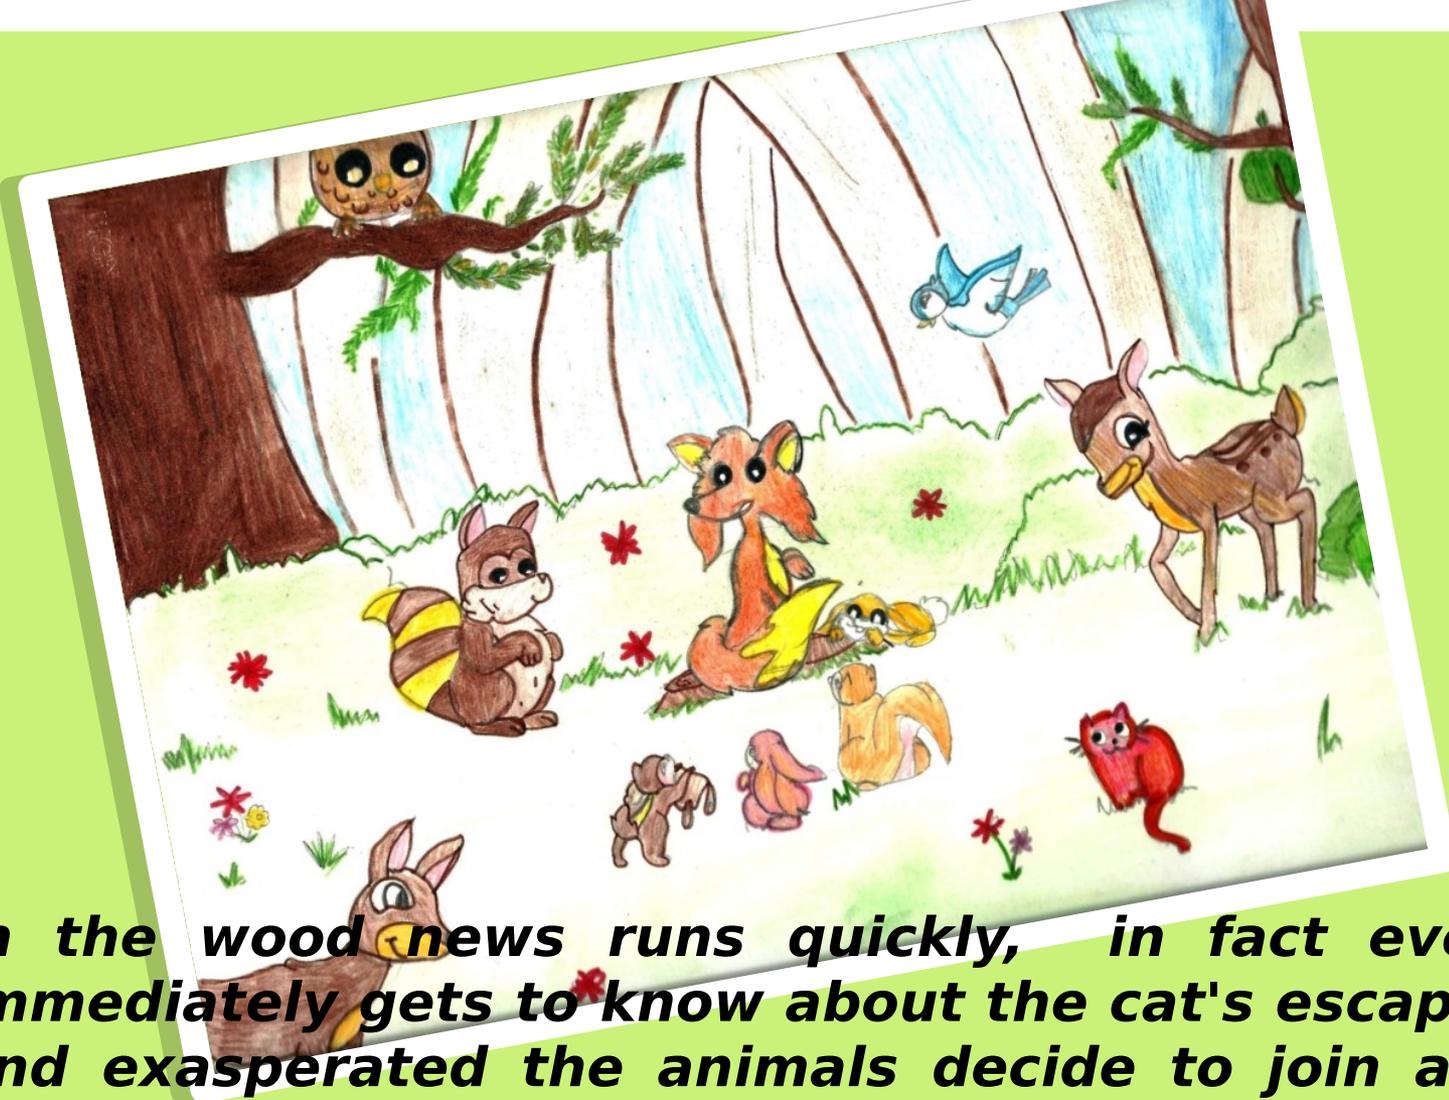

After having seen the scene from a tree the wise Owl understands time has come to intervene

While stopping the cat, he tries to take off, but being such an old bird, he falls down on the path in front of the cat.

He stands up, puts himself together and says:

“you can't escape from your problems, be brave and face the problem!”.

In the wood news runs quickly, in fact everybody immediately gets to know about the cat's escape. Tired and exasperated the animals decide to join and face the Fox. They go to her and tell her they are suffering and that she doesn't have their friendship, but just their fear. The Owl says: "remember, friends come whenever you need them, but as you don't have any, you'll be alone soon"

The Fox listens to him carefully, she looks around and immediately understands the Owl is right. She decides to change her behaviour and she becomes the most loved animal in the forest.
